A word from Pastor Phill

Our community has been touched by death. Several members have lost loved ones and we were all shocked at the death of Phillip Scevity. Death is unsettling, even for Christians. So how should we respond to death? Psalm 90 can help us.

1) Death is in God's hands

Life and death is in God's hands (v3,5). It is not fate. God determines our days according to His plans.

2) Life is short

Life could be as long seventy or eighty years (v10). This needs to be set against the age of mountains (v2) and our God who is eternal (v3). We are a blimp on the eternal stage. This makes our lives sound insignificant.

3) How we live matters

There is a day when God will call us to account for how we have lived (v6-8). He is interested in what we do day by day. So we should seek his wisdom in how we live (v12).

4) Live for God

The Psalm end with a request: Establish the works of our hands (v17). We want God to work in and through our lives. We want Him to be pleased with what we do.

5) Anticipate the return of Jesus

We grieve death and lament the passing of our years. Hope is what drives us on. The best years are in front of us. We will be clothed with the imperishable. We will be reunited with brothers and sisters in Christ. Death has lost its' sting. So let's grieve looking to the future and living for our Lord.
